Emergency Communications Honors 911 Dispatchers

They are just three numbers away any time of the day or night and are the unsung heroes of public safety, working behind the scenes to get law and emergency responders to you when you need it.

911 Emergency Communications recently gave its annual honors to dispatchers who have done outstanding work in a job that demands excellence on a regular basis.
Approximately 60 dispatchers work at the Emergency Communications Center, answering more than 650,000 calls a year from 14 police agencies and 17 fire districts. A dispatcher’s weekly schedule typically includes three 12-hour and one 8 hour days, but are often called on for mandatory overtime.

Here are this year’s honorees:

Dispatcher of the Year: Anna Helms
Anna has worked for more than 27 years as a Communications Dispatcher and was selected for this award for her overall outstanding performance, her knowledge about agency procedures and jurisdictions and her ability to identify needed improvements such as new procedures for assigning telephone answer assignments.

“What I do every day matters,” says Helms about her work. “How I do my job matters to so many people, the citizens of the county, the officers and the deputies.”

Supervisor of the Year: Rita Burke
Rita has worked in Emergency Communications for more than 16 years and was selected for this award for her overall outstanding performance as well as ability to improve service to the public. When noticing a downslope in call answer times, she found a way to quantify the radio workload versus telephone calls which significantly improved telephone answer times.

“We deal with a lot of people and on most cases it’s the worst day of their lives,” says Burke, whose father was a Greenfield Fire Department volunteer who encouraged her to look into dispatch as a career. “The wait is the hardest part of the job: not knowing the outcome of a call, staying on the line with a caller waiting for assistance trying to keep them calm or waiting for an officer to update his status after yelling for help.”

Customer Service Award: Shaun Eddings
Shaun was selected for this award for his overall outstanding performance, continued contribution and dedication, but singled out for his consistent and excellent customer service to the citizens and agencies of Monterey County.

Shaun has worked for Emergency Communications for more than three years. He was hired as a Communications Dispatcher Trainee then promoted to the journey level Communications Dispatcher II.

Rookie of the Year: Tabatha Chaffin
Tabatha was selected for this award for her ability to learn quickly. Tabatha progressed rapidly through her training, she was eager to learn and showed great dedication which helped her get through the training program quickly.

Tabitha has worked for Emergency Communications for more than two years, as a Communications Dispatcher Trainee then journey level Communications Dispatcher II.

CTO of the Year: Shelley Ankney
Shelley was selected for this award for her overall outstanding performance as a Training Officer.
Shelley has worked for Emergency Communications for more than 14 years and is a valuable asset to our training program. She consistently displays compassion and patience, having to work a radio channel, answer phones and train new employees. She plays a key role in the department’s in-house academies and created new training material about Monterey County geography.

Congratulations to these honorees!

Opportunities to Serve: County Commissions

Monterey County has a variety of board, committees and commissions which provide important oversight and service to the public. County Supervisors make appointments to many of these commissions, and there are some vacancies they’d like to fill.

Perhaps one of these panels addresses a community need or issue that interests someone you know? Those interested in serving and live in the district with the vacancy, should contact the supervisorial office listed for more information. There is more information about the commissions with vacancies at the available links.
